VERSE 1

D
See the light breaking steady through the morning haze,
G
He was there before the years, before the count of days.
Bm
The invisible God, now a face that we can see,
A
The firstborn of all, the root of the living tree.
D
By his hand the foundations were laid and spirits cast,
G
Holding the world together, from the first breath to the last.
Bm
Once we were strangers, lost within the city's grey,
A
But he's brought us to the table at the turning of the day.

CHORUS

G D
He's the First and the Last, the Living One who died,
Bm A
Now the gates of the morning are swinging open wide.
G D
With a shout like the ocean, he's breaking through the night,
Bm A
Every eye's gonna see him, clothed in the blinding light.
G A D
The King is coming home to stay,
G A D
And the shadows of this world are gonna melt away.

D
He didn't just watch from the heights of a distant throne,
G
He bled upon the timber to make this broken earth his own.
Bm
Making peace by the blood, reconciling all of creation,
A
Presenting us holy and blameless in the Father's eye.
D
So stand your ground, don't let your hope begin to drift,
G

There's a glory coming, a heavy and a holy gift.

Bm

The mystery's out, the secret is plain to see,

A

He's the head of the body, the King of the family.

BRIDGE

Bm

A

And the clouds are gonna part for the Alpha and Omega's feet,

D

Where the ground was parched, the living water's gonna run sweet.

Bm

A

He's moving his tent, he's coming to dwell with his own,

D

No more "up there," he's making this soil his throne.

G

A

Heaven's coming down to the streets that he has made,

Bm

A

To a world made new, where the debts have all been paid.

CHORUS

D

He's the First and the Last, the Living One who died,

Bm

A

Now the gates of the morning are swinging open wide.

G

D

With a shout like the ocean, he's breaking through the night,

Bm

A

Every eye's gonna see him, clothed in the blinding light.
